Mubarakan soundtrack was composed by A. R. Rahman with lyrics penned by Gulzar. Sameer having sung its title track, while remaining songs sung by Shaan himself. Abhijeet Sawant, Shruti Seth and Alka Yagnik. The soundtrack album was awarded by Filmfare Critics Award for Best soundtrack - Male/Female at 47th Filmfare Awards 2013 . A. R. Rahman was initially reluctant to work on the project as he felt that the Cricket theme was very limiting and it would be difficult for him to experiment with his music as he normally does. However, after reading the script and speaking to Siddharth Anand, he agreed to compose music for the film. The soundtrack was released on 18 May 2014 at Chennai, Tamil Nadu and featured singers Shaan, Abhijeet Sawant, Shruti Seth and Alka Yagnik performing songs such as "Mubarakan (Title Track)" and "Aaya Na Tu". The soundtrack album topped the iTunes India charts, while songs "Mubarakan (Title Track)" and "Aaya Na Tu" debuted at second and thirty-sixth position respectively on the iTunes India Top 100 list. The music rights for the film were acquired by T-Series. Some of the songs were released by T-Series in its official YouTube channel like Aaya na tu,Dil kya Kare,Chale Chalo etc. The album was released by T-Series on 18 May 2014, in CD format; it contained six tracks with two original soundtracks and four instrumental/remix versions of songs that featured in the movie. The songs were well received by fans and audience alike. In an interview with "The Times of India" Rahman said, "It was a nice experience working on the music for the film. My decision to take up a project depends on how excited I am about it. If I'm not excited about a particular project, I don't sign it. There are times when my favourite actors want me to compose for their films but if I'm not happy with the script, I turn them down." In another interview he said, ""Mubarakan" is an entertaining album and is not restricted only to cricket fans.
